18th CHINA LNG CONFERENCE 2024

& 5th Canada-China LNG and Energy Full Value Chain Forum

In 2023, with the falling price and loose supply in the natural gas market, the sustained economic recovery supported China's demand for natural gas to a steady upward trend. China's natural gas market consumption, production, and imports continued to grow. Consumption increased by 7% year-on-year, production grew approximately 6% and LNG imports increased by approximately 13%, making China once again the world's largest importer of LNG.

In 2024, the global LNG market is in a state of rebalancing, with international gas prices continuing to decline. The slow recovery of European industries and the moderate climate in Northeast Asia are inhibiting the growth of natural gas consumption. The international natural gas market is in a state of oversupply, and various factors are restraining the rise in gas prices. Although market prices continue to fluctuate, companies remain optimistic about the long-term growth in demand for natural gas. The United States will suspend the approval of new LNG export projects. As the world's largest exporter of LNG, this decision may have an impact on Europe and most Asian LNG importing countries.

To adapt to the new changes in the LNG industry environment, seize opportunities for development in the midst of changes, and create new corporation, you are invited to join us in Shenzhen, China for this grand gathering of China LNG industry to jointly promote the sustainable development of the industry.
